

Action Learning means action for equality

Women are harnessing the power of Action Learning to accelerate change in their organisations and boost equality. Krishna Kaur of HMPS, has chosen to go on Women and Work's Action Learning Set Facilitator training (ALS), provided by Skills for Justice and highly subsidised with Government funding.

Krishna felt that ALS could be a new tool to help her in her role as North West Area Diversity Manager by challenging attitudes, behaviours, practices and policy. Excited by the different techniques offered, Krishna intends to put theory into practice as soon as possible. 'I sincerely believe that Action Learning Sets can be used as a problem solving tool to challenge practices via managers and leaders who have direct influencing positions to change the culture of establishments', she says.

This course will have a real impact on her own career too. 'The learning on the course is of particular importance to me not only as a woman but as an Asian woman. It will help me to become a leader and inspire other Asian women to achieve their aspirations, and to influence from the highest point for real organisational and cultural change'.
