

Understanding our employer challenges

Our approach

Our long-established relationships with employers and partners across the UK help us to understand the key challenges that employers face. We can help you in the following areas:

- Right People, Right Skills – helping you to recruit and retain the right people and maximise their skills and potential
- Customer Satisfaction – developing your employees to ensure public confidence and trust in your organisation's abilities
- Leadership and Management – supporting you to develop the skills your leaders need in a fast moving and constantly changing environment
- More for Less – helping you to manage people and resources more effectively and share good practice.

Our products and services are based on effective research and consultation with employers to make sure they address these key challenges.

Skills for Justice is the Sector Skills Council for Justice and Community Safety.

We work for employers across a range of key sectors, all striving to deliver excellent services.

Our ultimate aim is to help employers be better skilled to deliver safer communities.

We work with key employers, the Governments of the UK and agencies within the skills system, to better equip workforces with the right skills now and for the future.

These include:

- community safety
- courts, tribunals and prosecution
- custodial care
- fire and rescue
- forensic science
- law enforcement
- legal
- offender management and support
- policing
- victim, survivor and witness support
- youth justice and the children's workforce

Our influence in learning and skills

Our work with employers gives us a clear understanding of their workforce development and skills needs, which we use to create fit for purpose solutions.

Our ability to influence the skills system means we ensure people develop the right skills needed by employers to deliver excellent services.

Using our knowledge of employers, we lobby the Government on their behalf to ensure their needs are considered in the development of new skills policies and we open up funding opportunities to provide cost-effective solutions.

Meeting the needs of our employers

The world continues to change rapidly for employers. They aspire to deliver ever improving services, but must do that in the face of financial pressures, targets and public expectations.

We are focused on helping our employers to develop the skills, knowledge and expertise of their workforce so they are best placed to deliver public benefit in these challenging times.

Our unique position as a Government-licensed Sector Skills Council and a not-for-profit organisation means we are fully committed to quality skills provision with employers' needs at the heart of everything we do.
